

Prof. Kirsty J. Freeman

Kirsty J. Freeman is an Associate Professor at the Rural Clinical School of Western Australia, with extensive international expertise in healthcare simulation and patient safety.

She serves as Secretary of the SESAM Board (Society for Simulation in Europe), where she champions the integration of high-quality simulation practices to advance patient safety globally.

Kirsty's work focuses on translating simulation research into practical applications across diverse healthcare environments, addressing barriers to implementation and fostering strategic partnerships.

Her international experience spans multiple healthcare systems, contributing to evidence-based approaches for integrating simulation into everyday patient safety efforts. Through her leadership in SESAM, she actively promotes collaboration and knowledge exchange to unlock simulation's full potential in improving patient outcomes.
